INTENDED AS Studies to acquire the Art of Singing.

These exercises were composed to be used simultaneously with his system, "The Art of Singing," or with any other method for the cultivation of the voice, and will take place of Concorn's Sourceatons being more melodious and better adapted for teaching. Some of these exercises are specially beautiful as well as useful, a mingling of dulce at utile, which secures the interest as well as the improvement of the student. The various styles developed in these exercises render them invaluable in an educational point of view, as they tend to enlarge the intelligence and the appreciation, and at the same time form the taste of the pupil. They must be studied carefully with reference to the innumerable marks of expression and ornamentation. Upon the minute accuracy with which these are accomplished depends the actual sterling advancement of the pupil; any evasion or slurring in these respects a time and effort utterly wasted, while, on the other hand, a close and patient investigation, and open to the sindent the means and resources by which great arisis produce their most brilliant and profound effects.—
